Northeast Zone Superintendent

Dawn Robinson brings a wide range of teaching, coaching and professional experience to her role as Northeast Zone superintendent.

“Whether we’re students or staff, we all have the capacity to learn and grow,” she says.

Robinson began her career as an elementary teacher in Miami, Florida. She taught for seven years before becoming an assistant principal there. She became a principal at an elementary school in Hialeah, Florida, and spent a decade there, leading a 2,200-student elementary school with 78 percent of students having limited English proficiency. In 2008, she became principal of a new K-8 school in Miami Lakes, Florida.

She has also taught education courses at the master’s and doctoral levels. In 2007, she began providing strategic coaching to principals at Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools to build leadership capacity at the school level.

A native of northern New Jersey, Robinson holds a bachelor’s degree in education and a master’s degree in educational leadership from the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Florida. She holds a doctorate in educational leadership from Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale. Her motto is, “People don’t care how much you know until they know how much you care.”
